

Downloaded from: justpaste.it/charlenejacksonmisconduct

Unusual court records raise 'misconduct' concerns in child custody cases

In raising another irregularity, pieces of recordings of hearings are missing, especially where Jackson admits to intentionally issuing rulings in non-appealable formats (minute orders) and admits she has personal motives to issue rulings in another case.

Jackson's comments she made while the FTR recordings were turned off should have been included in the record as the comments were made during court proceedings.

Instead Jackson purposely muted the record to protect herself from Judicial review.

Turning off the tape prior to the close of the hearing violates the litigants ability to have a record of the proceedings the court can review.

Citing concerns of "misconduct," victims of Jackson are taking the steps necessary to prevent this from happening to any other individual including filing appropriate complaints with the Arizona Commission on Judicial Conduct and referring the matter to law enforcement to investigate possible criminal activity such as:
Destruction of evidence in the form of missing FTR audio files and disposing of filings or evidence litigants submitted to the court; possible witness tampering; civil rights violations; official misconduct; extortion; fraud; bribery; and perjury.

Litigants who were victimized by Jackson's concealment and destruction of evidence plan to subpoena court reporters to participate in depositions about the missing audio files or possible secondary recordings.
The walls are closing in on the Maricopa County Superior Court that is shockingly refusing to hold Judge Jackson accountable for her pattern of undermining and manipulating the justice system.

Learn more about the misconduct committed by Maricopa County Superior Court Judge Charlene Jackson here

CORRUPTION